Key Employee System Restored as Recovery Continues Impact of Cybersecurity Attack Minimized by Fast Response

Over the Easter holiday weekend, the Unified Government detected a cybersecurity attack during routine maintenance of its systems. As previously shared, federal, state and local authorities were notified, and the situation immediately escalated to stop the spread of the attack and contain any damage.

“Due to the professional, fast, and tireless response of our team,” said Director of Technology Services Kevin Bibbs, “we were able to quickly identify the ransomware, isolate it by shutting down any impacted servers, and immediately begin an investigation to assess our systems and data.”

The Unified Government has confirmed that the attack was ransomware, which is one of the most prevalent types of cybersecurity attack. It is a malicious software that gains access to files or systems and blocks user access. Once encrypted, the files can then be held hostage until payment or ransom is paid. According to Governing Magazine, more than 70 percent of all ransomware attacks in the United States target state and local government. The average ransomware payment in the first half of 2021, according to security training company KnowBe4, was $570,000, while the average ransom amount demanded by cybercriminals was $5.3 million.

Unified Government did not pay any ransom as most services are supported by software as a service and cloud-based applications and all servers are routinely backed up. Several state and local services provided by the Unified Government were temporarily impacted when servers were shut down to ensure the incident remained isolated. Paying ransom does not necessarily mean that the Unified Government would have received access to all encrypted data.

Since then, the Department of Technology Services (DOTS) has been actively assessing and recovering any encrypted data from back-up. Last week, an internal service, the Employee Self-Service portal, was restored and most departments are now fully operational. The technology team continues to work to restore specific file access, and is focused on preventing the next attack. “We must continue to work to ensure our systems and data are secure and that we minimize risk wherever possible,” said Mr. Bibbs.

Following an investigation by both Microsoft and Sophos, the Unified Government will continue its effort to harden its systems, leverage more secure cloud-based solutions, advance end-point user protection, and implement a comprehensive training program for staff for our overall cybersecurity. “With technology playing a key role in our customer service and efficiency,” said Ms. Harrison-Lee, “understanding our vulnerabilities and supporting our staff is a top priority as a 21st century organization. We are committed to rethinking how our staff receive training and continue to implement best practices to ensure any future attacks are dealt with as swiftly and effectively as this most recent incident.”

KCKCC Receives $1.4 Million Grant to Serve Local High School Students

Kansas City Kansas Community College has been awarded $1.4 million by the U.S. Department of Education to implement the Upward Bound program. The grant begins in Fall 2022 and will continue through August 2027.

“Being awarded the Upward Bound grant allows Kansas City Kansas Community College to expand services into schools to help those students who need it the most. These expanded services, built around intensive and intentional academic and student support services, will help increase high school graduation rates and college preparedness,” said Dr. Greg Mosier, president of KCKCC. “The Upward Bound program expands KCKCC’s ability to positively impact workforce needs and educational readiness of underserved students in our community.”

The Upward Bound program serves low-income and potential first-generation college students with the goal of preparing participants for college. Students receive comprehensive academic assistance and overall support for students and families, including advising, tutoring, study skills workshops, test taking support and college and financial aid application assistance.

Whereas, the Unified Government recognizes that under the Tenth Amendment of the United States Constitution states and local governments have the right to be free from mandates or financial obligation to perform the duties of the federal government, or to be threatened or coerced to do so by withholding federal funding; and

Whereas, residents need to feel safe and protected by law enforcement when they seek services and that they will not be exposed to immigration enforcement, and
