American Heart Association: Understanding cardiac arrest and emergency response following Damar Hamlin's collapse during Monday Night Football

While playing in the Buffalo Bills - Cincinnati Bengals game on Monday Night Football on January 2, Bills player Damar Hamlin suffered cardiac arrest after a hit and was administered CPR on the field before being transferred to an area hospital, according to an overnight statement by the Buffalo Bills.

On-site care explanation
Hamlin reportedly experienced a cardiac arrest – when the heart stops abruptly with little or no warning. Early recognition of cardiac arrest improves the person's chance of survival and is key to starting the correct care of CPR and the appropriate use of defibrillation to restart the heart. The on-site medical team evaluated the situation and appeared to quickly remove his safety pads, begin

CPR and apply the automated external defibrillator (AED).

CPR can help keep the heart pumping and blood flowing to vital organs until an electrical shock from a defibrillator is available to restore the heart to a normal heart rhythm. Then the patient can be safely moved for further medical treatment, supportive care, testing to determine what the cause of the arrest may have been and recovery, including both physical and mental health resources for the person and their family.

Possible causes

Cardiac arrest can have several causes. Since Hamlin collapsed immediately following a tackle on the play, one potential cause could be commotio cordis. Commotio cordis is a rare phenomenon from a sudden blunt impact to the chest causing sudden death in the absence of apparent cardiac damage. [1] The blow to the chest at precisely the wrong time in the cardiac cycle causes an electrical abnormality in the heart resulting in an irregular heart rhythm that cannot pump blood to the body. Immediate CPR and a shock to reset the rhythm can help the heartbeat return to normal function.

Another cause of cardiac arrest that additional tests are likely to attempt to detect or rule out is hypertrophic cardiomyopathy (HCM) or a thickened heart muscle – a more common cause of sudden cardiac death in young people and athletes specifically. The thickened heart can be due to a genetic condition or can be caused by athletic conditioning that thickens the muscles of the heart and can make it more susceptible to an irregular heart rhythm like ventricular fibrillation/tachycardia[2].

Traumatic stress for responders, observers

Witnessing and responding to a cardiac arrest can be a very traumatic event and may cause lingering psychological impact regardless of the outcome. Lay responders and witnesses may need support and resources to help process their experience.

Responders have cited exhaustion, guilt, flashbacks, sleep disturbances, self-doubt, anger, sadness and fear. A positive outcome to performing CPR can mitigate some of the emotional responses; however, psychological responses are wide-ranging and individualized. In situations with a failed resuscitation attempt, PTSD symptom scores were twice as high for responders as those for non-witnesses.

“This was traumatic for everyone, especially Hamlin's family and teammates but also for so many others involved and witnessing the event. More than 70% of cardiac arrests that do not happen in the hospital, occur in a home where access to medical professionals and an AED is not as readily available,” said Mariell Jessup, M.D., FAHA, chief science and medical officer of the American Heart Association. “Recognizing a cardiac arrest, calling 911 immediately, performing CPR and using an AED as soon as it is available are critical for survival. Statistically speaking, it is likely that the person will need to be helped by a family member or a friend in order to survive.”

Having community members trained in CPR and AEDs in public spaces can increase the chances of survival. The rate of bystander CPR in North America is estimated at only 39-44%, and only about 1 in 10 people survive an out-of-hospital cardiac arrest. Improving the rate of bystander CPR is critical to increasing survival from out-of-hospital cardiac arrest (OHCA).

The skill to perform CPR and use a defibrillator are the foundational components of preparing laypeople to respond to cardiac arrest. People also need to feel emotionally prepared to respond and be able to cope with the aftermath of actually performing CPR.[3]

Resources for learning CPR

Each year in the United States, an estimated 350,000 people experience sudden cardiac arrest in the community[4]. Anyone who witnesses a cardiac arrest in the community (i.e., not in a hospital) can perform CPR. Roughly 70% of cardiac arrests that do not happen in the hospital, occur in homes and private residences, therefore, a friend or family member is mostly likely to be the person who needs to take action. CPR, especially if performed immediately, can double or triple a cardiac arrest victim's chance of survival.

For adults and adolescent children, Hands-Only CPR is an easy-to-learn skill that requires only two steps: call emergency services and push hard and fast in the center of the chest at a rate of 100-120 beats per minute.

Description of Minimum Qualification Requirements:
Proposals will only be considered from qualified Licensed Investigative Contractors. Qualified Investigative Contractors are those who have demonstrated their ability to comply with the investigative specifications through prior work, have the financial resources necessary to complete the work, and whose proposals are fully responsive to the Request for Proposal. Furthermore, BPU recognizes that specific companies may have differing expertise and not all companies may be appropriate for all investigations. Therefore, the RFP is being issued in an attempt to pre-qualify one or more companies that could provide investigative services from time to time. Selected companies (or company) would be expected to enter into a Master Services Agreement with BPU that would be supplemented by Task Authorizations for each specific investigation.
Submitting a Proposal:
The responses to this Request for Proposals will be made using the BPU's forms provided through DemandStar. These forms can be reformatted as desired but all information required on each form must be clearly shown. Proposers may supplement these forms with their own written proposals.
Proposers must submit one electronic copy of their proposal by time and date specified as the proposal deadline date in DemandStar.
Asking Questions or Clarifications:
Proposers may request additional information by submitting their questions via email to: Jacquelyn Bagby, jbagby@bpu. and purchasing@bpu.com by the date specified in SC.2. All questions must be directed to the Department of Purchasing and Supply. Answers to all questions will be compiled and distributed through DemandStar as an addendum. No Proposer shall discuss details of this Request for Proposals with BPU personnel outside of the Purchasing Department except during an interview with the Selection

LEGAL NOTICE

Committee.

The successful Proposer shall enter into a contract with the BPU and furnish the required insurance certificate satisfactory to the BPU. Thereafter, all obligations of unselected Proposers shall cease.
The BPU reserves the right to reject any or all Proposals and waive irregularities therein, and all Proposers agree that such rejection shall be without liability on the part of the BPU for any penalty of any kind brought against the BPU because of such rejections. By filing any Proposal in response to this invitation, Proposer agrees to these conditions. The BPU is not obligated to request clarifications or additional information but may do so at its discretion. The BPU reserves the right to extend the deadline for submittals for all Proposers.
Upon BPU's receipt of a proposal, the proposal shall become the property of BPU without compensation to the Proposer, for disposition or usage by the BPU at its discretion. Subject to the provisions of the Kansas Open Records Act, the details of the proposal documents will remain confidential until final award.
The BPU assumes no responsibility or obligation to the Proposers and will make no payment for any costs associated with the preparation or submission of the proposal.
Proposals that take exception or make addition to any term or condition, technical requirement, or submission requirement are subject to disqualification at the BPU's discretion.
A proposer may not withdraw its Proposal after the submittal deadline.
